

After interviewing Buzz Larsen on tape, he called with this story. 16 January 2004. Add to his oral history transcription.

Buzz Larsen: I rode horseback from Ouray to Salt Lake five different times. My dad would buy wild horses from Indians and take them to SLC for fish food and other animal feeds.

KI: Was it hard traveling with them?

Buzz: It was in a way. You had to keep them in a slow trot. If you stopped, you couldn't get them going again.

KI: Did you go by yourself?

Buzz: Oh, no. There was about six Indian people, two in front, one on each side and two in the back and me.

KI: How many horses did you take out?

Also: The dentist who sold him Victory Park was Dr. Campbell, nicknamed "Mighty". Dr. Campbell originally built Victory Park.

Buzz: At least fifty, I guess, forty or fifty. It was a pretty good string.
